

New Year, New Start

Want to find an encore career in 2010 but don't know how to get started? Check out "10 Ways to Jump-Start Your Encore Career Search."

- Read more

What's New

Financing Your Encore Career

In his new book, Drive, Daniel Pink, shown at left, argues that employers should abandon carrots and sticks and recognize that workers are motivated by intrinsic forces, such as the desire for autonomy and mastery and the quest to be part of something bigger than themselves. Marci Alboher, senior fellow at Civic Ventures, interviewed Pink recently and shares his thoughts on how to find meaningful work.

- Read more

Financing Your Encore Career

Financial blogger Manisha Thakor, at left, coauthor of Get Financially Naked, offers three straightforward, powerful steps you can take to figure out how to finance your encore career.

- Read more

Nominate Someone for the $100,000 Purpose Prize

Don Coyhis, 66, of Colorado Springs, Colo., built a nationwide substance abuse recovery program based on Native American beliefs and traditions.

Judith Broder, 69, of Studio City, Calif., recruits mental health professionals to provide free, confidential counseling to veterans, active-duty military personnel and their families. Both won the $100,000 Purpose Prize in 2009.

Do you know someone over 60 who is tapping passion and experience to improve the lives of others in an encore career?

- Nominate yourself or someone you know for the 2010 Purpose Prize.
The deadline is March 5, 2010.
- Spread the word via email or in a newsletter.

Encore Careers and Encore.org are publications of Civic Ventures, a think tank on boomers, work and social purpose. ©2010 Civic Ventures.